

RATAN TATA

Tata Motors
Algeria, Congo, Egypt,
Kenya, Mozambique,
Nigeria, Senegal,
South Africa

ANIL AMBANI

RELIANCE

Reliance Communication
Uganda

SAJJAN JINDAL

Jindal Steel & Power Ltd.
Uganda

RAJENDRA PAWAR

NIIT

NIIT
Botswana

ANIL AGARWAL

Vedanta
Zambia

R.S. SHARMA

ONGC
Angola, Sudan

PRASHANT RUITA

Essar Group
Kenya

AMIT BURMAN

Dabur
Nigeria

HARSH MARIWALA

Marico
Egypt

ANAND MAHINDRA

Mahindra &
Mahindra
South Africa

SANJAY KIRLOSKAR

Kirloskar
Senegal

PHOTO DIVISION

PETROLEUM MINISTER MURLI DEORA (CENTRE) WITH HIS NIGERIAN COUNTERPART HENRY ODEIN AJUMOGOBIA (SECOND FROM LEFT)

discussion with countries like Gabon to source uranium.

There is growing recognition in official circles that India needs to ramp up economic ties with Africa as highlighted by the recent Africa-India Conclave which managed to discuss business projects worth $10 billion. India Inc and public financial institutions are creating a symbiotic network. Extension of credit for African business is one chosen instrument of access. Rajeev Kumar, head, International, Escorts, says, "Indian investors are respected but what has also helped is the pragmatic approach to business finance through Government of India's lines of credit." This clearly has helped investors and the potential is enormous. The Tatas who were the first to make their presence are among the biggest industrial players in the continent with investments of over $1.6 billion, the latest being a luxury hotel in Cape Town. The most visible presence, of course, is of automobiles. "South Africa is integral to Tata Motors' global business footprint and the company perceives huge opportunities in this focus market over the next five years," says R.T. Wasan, head, international business, commercial vehicles, Tata Motors.

Pitted against China, which has embarked on a no-holds barred strategy on Africa with defence packages and aid compared to India's lines of credit, Delhi has adopted a slow approach. Though China has invested $119 billion across sectors, it's settling in Chinese workers in these countries and is using Africa to source raw materials. On the other hand, India is working on projects that benefit the African people. "We want to give them what the Africans want, not what benefits us alone," explains a senior MEA official. And a case in point, is a Pan-African e-Network Project that brought to the fore India's prowess in information technology to which 47 African countries are connected. The project now provides them opportunities for tele-medicine and tele-education linkages with Indian hospitals and universities, part of India's capacity development diplomacy.

India's interest is not just about commerce but security as well. Countries like Kenya are vital to India's fight against terrorism. New Delhi seeks to put a leash on Indian mafia groups

"WE ARE HELPING THE AFRICAN PEOPLE TO IMPROVE THE QUALITY OF THEIR LIVES BY BUILDING A WIN-WIN PARTNERSHIP FOR US."

S.M. KRISHNA
UNION MINISTER FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

"THIS MOVE BY THE BHARTI GROUP WILL ENHANCE INDIA'S BRAND EQUITY AND ADD A NEW DIMENSION TO THE INDIA GROWTH STORY."

AMIT MITRA
SECRETARY-GENERAL,
FICCI