

New Decade: Great Expectations

MARCH 29, 2010

The galaxy of leaders and star speakers at the INDIA TODAY Conclave 2010 expressed their views on the topic, New Decade: Great Expectations, across a wide spectrum of interests.

“When great minds meet, it results in the best ideas, innovations, inspiration and vision for the future. No wonder the Conclave, with the theme ‘New Decade: Great Expectations’, was an astonishing thrill.”

Beautiful Minds

Union Home Minister P. Chidambaram must learn to act effectively and decisively against the Naxals and Maoists, who are dreaming to liberate India by 2050 (“New Decade: Great Expectations”, March 29). The reign of these anti-nationals is palpable in Bengal, Bihar and Orissa, where a 48-hour bandh is a routine affair every month and results in great loss of public property and the lives of security personnel. Chidambaram must take solid, unrelenting and resolute steps to crush this national menace.

I found David Bloom’s analysis of India’s demographic profile thought-stimulating. Without a check on our population

Recipe for the Right

The time has come for the BJP to have party elections to ensure better representation at the decision-making level (“Losers in Charge”, March 29). The bloated office-bearers represent nothing but old wine in a new bottle. Though Nitin Gadkari has tried to please everyone, he has ignored grassroots workers.
DBN MURTHY, Bangalore

To improve the BJP’s image, Gadkari would have to demonstrate astute leadership qualities. He must enforce discipline, without which the BJP will not be able to make a comeback. Indian democracy cannot survive without a strong opposition in Parliament.

growth, our efforts to lower the child mortality rate and enhance the longevity rate will spell social and economic disaster for the nation.

The quest to cure India’s chronic problems and attain inclusive growth would be possible if the durable and innovative ideas presented in the Conclave are put into practice. One hopes that Kapil Sibal’s education reforms will make India more literate in the next decade. But tackling terrorism and the eroding environment is still a distant dream. The politics of global terror and environment needs to be cleaned up before we see a change. The next decade would demand our zeal to overcome
