

SESSION CHAIRPERSON ROHIT SARAN WITH ARORA

fascinating to watch how people like Bollywood stars are beginning to do their own brand management on the Internet. Companies are managing their brand using the Internet. If you are launching a brand or a consumer product, you can look up Facebook and Twitter for feedback and incorporate that into your market research way before your branding and customer service surveys.

A whole world of technology is happening out there. Technology breaks down into application, device and the network that goes into it. Our founder has an interesting philosophy: "Waste what is in abundance, to optimise what is scarce". The idea works for technology. Storage and computing power is getting cheaper everyday. We are turning into an open resource work. People are going to be able to write applications which need to work in as many devices as possible. This is all going to happen in the next 5-8 years. Technology is changing the shape of every business. The way to think about the Internet is it provides a new way of consumption, people can consume things differently, and it provides a new way of distribution. Same thing will happen to different industries in different shapes, ways, and forms. It will change the way politics is conducted. Many politicians actually had Facebook managers and now US President Barack Obama takes questions from YouTube which means technology now has the ability to give you instant feedback.

DISCUSSION

Q. Is it true that if one watched all the videos uploaded on YouTube today, it will take about 600 years.

A. Maybe longer because people upload 20 hours of video every minute.

Q. Of all the things that Google has been working on, what is the next big thing?

A. We have very interesting ongoing projects in the technology and the browser world. On the technology side, we have a new phone. We have flood applications and are working on lots of interesting consumer stuff which is already out there.

Q. I got the Google phone but it doesn't do many things which phones 10 years ago could do.

A. We had some teething troubles with the Nexus One. If you launch early, you are not going to get everything right. The question is do you have the ability to go and fix things and make it work? We are constantly improving search and we are constantly improving our products.
