

LEGAL EAGLES

If one has a knack of doing the right thing and getting paid handsomely for it, a course in law might just do the needful.

An all-time favourite, a course in law still attracts young minds. Recently, many universities across the country have reinvented their courses to suit the industry needs and just made law an even more sought-after career option. A dual degree in law allows one to major in law as well as subjects such as business management or information technology simultaneously. A law course along with some additional course gives students a sound grounding in both the disciplines, giving them a competitive edge over their counterparts from regular law courses.

With judiciary being the largest segment, law professionals are also required by all business houses, financial institutes and government undertakings.

■ ELIGIBILITY

Basic school education with at least 50 per cent marks. Most institutes have an entrance exam.

■ INSTITUTES

National Law School of India University, Bangalore, www.nls.ac.in

It offers undergraduate, postgraduate and research programmes.

National Law University, Jodhpur, www.nlujodhpur.ac.in

It offers a B.Sc Technology (Hons) LLB (Hons) and a BPSc (Hons) LLB (Hons) as well.

Guru Gobind Singh Indraprastha University, Delhi, www.ggsipu.nic.in

It includes modules on financial accounting, HR, management and economics.

■ COST OF PROGRAMME

Rs 2, 50,000-4, 00,000 per year

15 years later – Rs 10.3 lakh approx

Know more about future cost of pursuing this career with Aviva Educost at www.educationisinsurance.com and plan for it.