

THE BIG PICTURE

Passion, patience and perseverance can map the road to success for an aspiring filmmaker

If there is a storyteller somewhere hidden in your child, films might just be his calling. Making a film, however, is not a child's play. From crisis management to ego management, from fulfilling whims of the stars to coordinating travel plans and working out bank formalities, filmmakers do just about everything to ensure that the project is complete on time. Teamwork is integral to filmmaking. One also needs to ensure co-ordination from various skilled individuals like actors, directors, producers, script writers, cinematographers, photographers, make-up artists, sound recorders, visual mixers, editors and so on. Candidates can find employment in film studios, production companies and advertising agencies or start their own venture as producer, director, editors, cameramen, soundmen, lighting crews, assistants and so on. Jobs in filmmaking are plenty. In fact, there is a lopsided demand-supply situation. Right at the outset, a producer for a television show easily earns a salary of Rs 40-45,000 a month with a hike of 30-40 per cent in the first year itself.
