

Voices from Pakistan

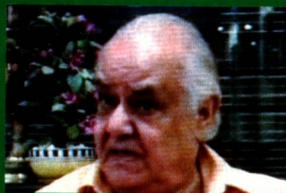

"The fifth round of composite dialogue should be completed. We need to make the joint anti-terror mechanism more effective."

AZIZ AHMED KHAN, former Pakistan high commissioner to India

"By not holding talks, fourteen months have been wasted. Approach the dialogue process with an open mind, and no subject should be taboo."

RIAZ KHOKHAR, former Pakistan foreign secretary

"The heads of the two intelligence agencies should work out a coordinating mechanism on terrorism. On Kashmir, back channel talks should be resumed."

HUMAYUN KHAN, former Pakistan foreign secretary and high commissioner to India offered to send the ISI chief to India for talks and then backtracked.

What needs to be done: Instead of a joint terror mechanism, an institutional dialogue can be set up between the two intelligence chiefs to exchange information on terrorism and to assess the progress in counter-terrorism efforts. This can reduce the trust deficit between the two. India must address the issue of action against the perpetrators of the attack on the Indian mission in Kabul in 2008, where the US and Western intelligence agencies had confirmed an ISI connection, and those behind the attack must be punished.

5. Stop Cross Border Infiltration

Infiltration of terrorists is an indicator of the activities of the terror groups being trained in Pakistan. According to intelligence estimates, the numbers of infiltration attempts have gone up significantly, and in the normally lean winter months, there has been a steady rise in the number. Infiltration of terrorists from across the border is an indicator of the heightened activities of Pakistan-based terror groups. Intelligence inputs suggest that even in the normally lean winter months, there has been a steady rise in the number of infiltration attempts. In 2009, the infiltration figures increased by 40 per cent with 485 infiltration attempts reported on the Line of Control (LOC) and an estimated 113 terrorists managed to infiltrate inside Indian territory as compared to 58 who managed to infiltrate in 2008, with 343 infiltration attempts reported that year. Anti-India terror masterminds like Saeed who is named by India in the Mumbai chargesheet, had a big rally in Lahore last week which was attended by former ISI officials and some serving officials. Preceding this was another meeting on February 4 that called for renewing the jihad against India. "We are greatly concerned. Such groups and their leaders have been allowed to move around unchecked in Pakistan. Their activities undermine the prospects for peace in our region," says Rao.

What needs to be done: India must seek banning of groups such as Jamaat-

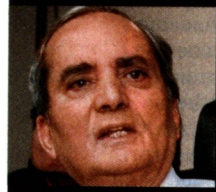

INDIA TODAY'S

VED MARWAH
Former DG, National Security Guard

LT-GEN (RETD) SATISH NAMBIAR Former deputy chief of the Army Staff

KAPIL KAK
Additional Director, Centre for Air Power Studies

KIRAN BEDI
Former DG, Bureau of Police Research and Development

ud-Dawah (JUD) and their affiliates working under the garb of charitable organisations. During the talks it must make it clear that any infiltration attempts will be treated as complicity of the Government.

6. Settle Water Disputes

Water wars are poised to be conflict triggers for the future and the disputes over building dams on Indus river basin have snowballed into a major controversy between the two sides. Terror groups are now using the water issue to ratchet tensions. Under the Indus Water Treaty brokered by the World Bank, the water of the three eastern rivers—Sutlej, Beas and Ravi—are available for unrestricted use of India, and Pakistan will get the water of Indus, Jhelum and Chenab. But Pakistan accuses India of diverting its water by building dams on these rivers. India maintains that these are run of the river projects and it is allowed to build them under the treaty. Water disputes, including the Tulbul navigation project, is a part of the eight-point composite dialogue. In the past, Pakistan raised the Baglihar dam issue with the World Bank and sought international arbitration which gave a ruling in