

The Gandhi-Jinnah talks began in Bombay on September 19, 1944, and lasted till the 24th. Gandhi told Quaid-i-Azam that he had come in his personal capacity and was representing neither the Hindus nor the Congress. Gandhi's real purpose behind these talks was to extract from Jinnah an admission that the whole proposition of Pakistan was absurd. Jinnah stuck adamantly to his two-nation theory.

The Maharaja of Jaipur taking the oath of allegiance to the Indian Union in 1948 while Sardar Patel usurps the throne. Princely states were given the option of acceding to India or Pakistan or remain outside them. A majority acceded to the Indian union and were given privy purses according to their size or stature.

Nehru with Maulana Azad, renowned scholar and poet who became independent India's first education minister. He was a staunch opponent of Partition and it shattered his dream of a unified nation where Hindus and Muslims could co-exist and prosper.
