

A MAJORITY OF JOBS IN THE MANUFACTURING SECTOR WILL BE CREATED BY THE AUTOMOBILE AND CONSUMER DURABLES INDUSTRIES

We saw a revival two quarters ago when our pipeline started filling. Since 2009, the company's overall pipeline increased 29 per cent in contract value.

Most of this consumption has been driven by upgradation, which fuelled the demand for high-end products like LCD television sets and front-loading washing machines. A majority of the jobs in manufacturing will, therefore, be created by sectors like automobile and consumer durables. At present, the auto industry employs around 13 million people in direct and indirect jobs. By an estimate, the Indian automobile industry will create another five million direct and indirect jobs by 2012. This is in line with the Automotive Mission Plan to take the employment level to around 25 million by 2016. Explains S.Y. Siddiqui, managing executive officer (administration, human resources, finance and IT) at Maruti Suzuki: "We will hire 950 people in 2010-11. Out of this, 350 will be recruited for the shop-floor and the rest will be an equal mix of fresh engineers or MBAs and people with some experience."

The news is as encouraging for the consumer durables space. Samsung India is targeting a growth of 40 per cent in its sales in 2010 for which the company has begun an aggressive expansion of manpower. Over the last three months, it has hired close to hundred people in the sales, product management, marketing and communication functions. Says Sanjay Bali, vice-president, corporate human resource, Samsung India: "We have already hired 200 people in the manufacturing area this year and are looking at hiring as we plan our manufacturing investments this year. The company has recruited hundred employees each at its Noida and Chennai plants."

Going forward, new skills will be required in the manufacturing sector. Skills
