increases as niche talent in legal, pharma and analytic KPOs is still not very easy to find. India is expected to add about 15,600 hotel rooms in 2010. And by 2011, 40 new international hotel brands will be operational in India. Add to this, close to 415 projects or 68,480 rooms are under various stages of development and 41 per cent of these projects may start adding to existing inventory from 2010. Clearly, this is not a small figure and even if one presumes a moderate figure of two people to service per room, the number of people that the sector will need to recruit is 32,000.

In view of the high employment potential of the sector, Finance Minister Pranab Mukherjee has provided investment-linked incentives to the hotel sector, irrespective of the location. The incentive will allow 100 per cent tax deduction on any expenditure on capital (other than land), goodwill and financial instruments.

According to the World Travel and Tourism Council, the tourism industry in India is likely to generate $121.4 billion of economic activity by 2015 and will earn $24 billion in foreign exchange. By 2018, the market for the hospitality industry is expected to double in size. With India all set to host the Commonwealth Games later this year, the hospitality sector has braced itself for a heavy tourist inflow. Considering that the sector is targeting 10 million foreign tourists this year, which is twice the number of tourists that came to India in 2008, the need for more rooms is justified. By 2019, about 1.59 crore people will be directly employed. The Oberoi Group, which plans to recruit 700-800 people across all levels this year, is looking for people with good communication skills, domain knowledge and confidence. The sector will create at least one lakh jobs each year.
