

MEET THE TWITTERATI

He may have left the cows unhappy but the virtual world couldn't follow Shashi Tharoor faster, at least on Twitter. Many said it was a fad, others said he won't be allowed to continue, but Tharoor's kept his word, even tweeting about his Udaipur holiday, to his over five lakh followers now.

Before the Bollywood bandwagon could even get a BlackBerry, Priyanka Chopra was already tweeting away. One of the first film people to sign up, Chopra's now got over one lakh followers. Thankfully, she doesn't only push the buttons when she's got a film lined up, Chopra's been tweeting about her holidays and a short stint at the doctor.

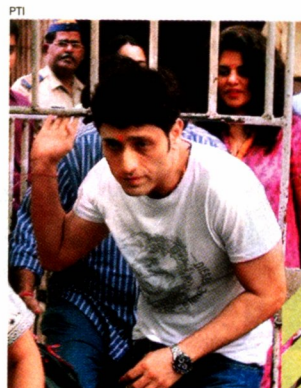

CRYBABY OF THE YEAR

To think of it, the signs were there even in 1996 when Vinod Kambli left the Eden Gardens pitch, teary eyed. This year, the waterworks returned in full force, albeit not with the same public support. FLOP SHOW

Last year, Akshay Kumar could do no wrong, this year he could do nothing right. His year started with the tedious Chandni Chowk to China, prodded on with the offensive Kambakht Ishq and ended in red with the disastrous Blue. There were others in between but we've picked the ones on top of the heap. The man's got to do something fast and that does not include teaching women how to jump off a helicopter.

Shiney Ahuja was living up to his name till a few years ago. And then the films dried up. Just when he was ready to start Act II, he ended up acting fresh—with his maid. Many SMS jokes and TV debates later, Ahuja faces a jail term, is cooped up at his

SOFT DISMISSAL

Perhaps if a bit of the promotion money had been spent on the script, Rani Mukerji would still be on top of her game. For Dil Bole Hadippa, the actor sweated it out and went from flab to fab. She even got Manish Malhotra to make her over for the press. Out went churidars, in came Chanel. Alas, no one cared about her or the little Sardar boy.
