

Great escape: Erling Haaland's (left) controversial goal was the decisive factor for City in the Manchester derby.

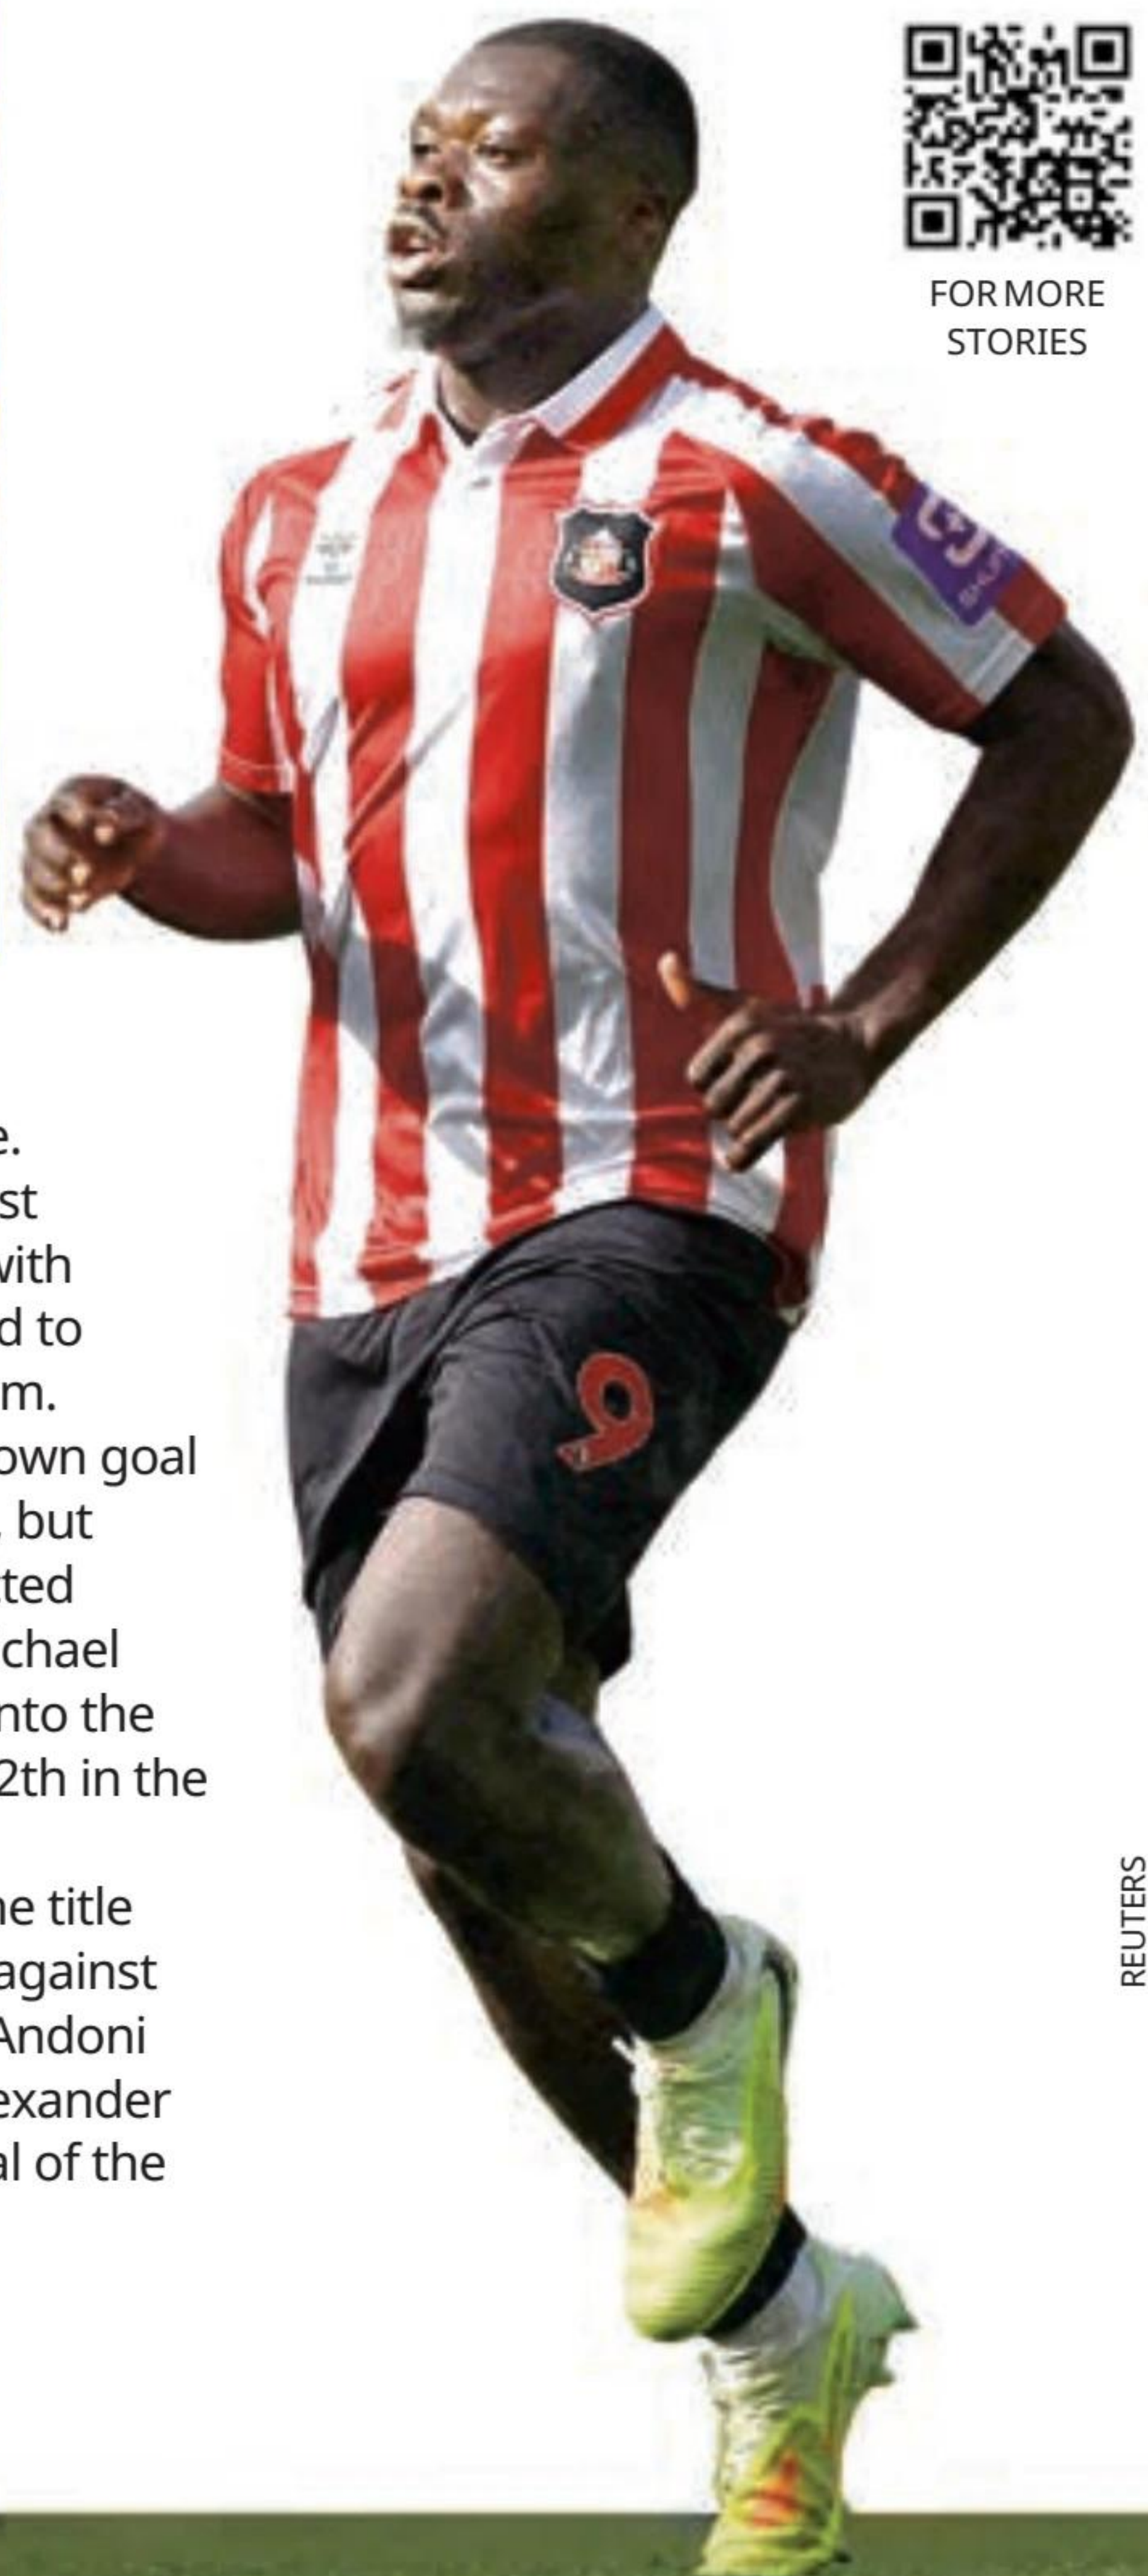

REUTERS

Title holder Arsenal's seven-match winning streak in all competitions came to an end against a spirited Brighton and Hove Albion. Pascal Gross opened the scoring with a pinpoint strike before teenager Charalampos Kostas and Chema Andrés compounded the Gunners' miserable afternoon. The Seagulls soared to third in the table post this result.

The situation is worse for Chelsea, which is winless in its last three league games. The latest setback was a dispiriting 3-0 loss against Brentford, following a 2-2 draw against Hull City.

FOR MORE STORIES

REUTERS

on play from an offside position — an error that the referees' body later admitted to.

City's next fixture against Sunderland was a pure goal fest, with Brian Brobbey (right) becoming the first player since Jamie Vardy in 2020 to bag a hat-trick against the Manchester giant. However, his efforts ultimately proved in vain as City found the net five times, with Antoine Semenyo grabbing a brace, while Rayan Cherki, Fernandez and Haaland also got on the scoresheet. Haaland's goal was extra special as it meant the Norwegian had scored against every Premier League team he faced — a feat previously achieved only by Harry Kane.

United, meanwhile, almost followed up the derby loss with another defeat but managed to scrape a draw against Fulham. Lisandro Martinez's bizarre own goal gave the Cottagers the lead, but Matheus Cunha's late deflected strike rescued a point for Michael Carrick's side, which heads into the international break sitting 12th in the table.

Liverpool got itself into the title race with a scrappy 1-0 win against Bournemouth, head coach Andoni Iraola's former club, with Alexander Isak grabbing his fourth goal of the league campaign.