DELHI | Red Carpet Race

Uttarakhand and Gujarat may be BJP-ruled states, but when it comes to business, there is no mutual competition lost. Chief Ministers Ramesh Pokhriyal and Narendra Modi are now in a race to woo auto majors to set up facilities in their respective states. Uttarakhand, which lost out to Gujarat on the Nano plant, is looking to draw Renault-Bajaj's small car factory and roll out a red carpet for the manufacturers. Gujarat is also now courting Maruti to set up a car project by holding out cheaper and economically viable export of cars from its Mundra port to counter the landlocked hill state. Car dealers are now hinting that Bajaj may actually want to manufacture more cars from Pantnagar—where it is producing the Platina, XCD and Discover motorcycles. Pokhriyal may now extend the special industrial package offering tax incentives by three more years till 2013, which may be an added attraction for Bajaj in the hill state. The car race is on. by Nivedita Mukherjee
