Screen Play

Sexual fantasies play an intrinsic role in films, taking the story forward. It could be a teenaged boy desiring his older teacher or the use of a foreign language as a seduction tool. My 10 best fantasies on screen.

1 A FISH CALLED WANDA

I was in school when I saw this film. Wanda Gershwitz (Jamie Lee Curtis) has a foreign language fetish in this film. So when Otto (Kevin Kline) starts speaking senseless Italian, Gershwitz starts undressing seductively. Seeing her Otto goes, 'Ooh, le due coupoule grande della caterderale di Milano' (Ooh, the two great domes of the Cathedral of Milan). It made me laugh out loud but it remains a memorable sex scene.

2 9½ WEEKS

Food possibly can't be more sexualised. Some strawberries, olives, pasta, jelly, honey, a silk scarf and some ice cubes is all it took. John (Mickey Rourke) and Elizabeth (Kim Basinger) have a whole lot of sex but it's their creative foreplay using yummy props that makes this my all-time best fantasy scene. The best scene has to be Rourke blindfolding Basinger and beginning his masterful seduction by playfully clicking glass against her ear and teasing her neck and breasts with an ice cube while she bites his wandering hand.

3 HISTORY OF VIOLENCE

Tom (Viggo Mortensen) is a family man married to Edie (Maria Bello). The first sex scene of the film demonstrates that even regular people have hot sex lives. Of course, it helps that Edie ups the fantasy element by putting on her old cheerleader get-up for this particular occasion. "Holy... cow!" Tom exclaims.

4 GHOST

How can the erotic pottery scene between Molly Jensen (Demi Moore) and Sam Wheat (Patrick Swayze) from Ghost not be on this list?

5 COMING HOME

Uptight Army wife Sally Hyde (Jane Fonda) falls for paraplegic Vietnam vet Luke Martin (Jon Voight) in this anti-war drama that earned Oscars for both actors. Voight can't walk in the film but he proves he can still please a woman. She gets her first orgasm ever after oral sex.

6 TITANIC

Two scenes stand out in this film—the nude sketching scene and the one where Rose and Jack actually make love in the car. The sketching scene serves as foreplay for Rose (Kate Winslet) and Jack (Leonardo DiCaprio) to do the real thing in the back seat of a car.

7 BELLE DE JOUR

Severine Serizy (Catherine Deneuve), married to a surgeon, takes fantasy to another level. In one scene, Severine and her husband Pierre (Jean Sorel) have had a disagreement in a coach. Unexpectedly, the husband orders the coachman to bind his wife to a tree and asks him to whip her. She comes to enjoy this. This is when she wakes up and we see her gazing dispassionately across her bedroom where her bland husband is dressed in cute pyjamas. This sequence is startling because it is so deadpan. Luis Bunuel, the director, presented the protagonist's masochistic dream without even a hint that it was fantasy. Severine eventually starts working in a brothel for the wild sex. Her husband provides for her material needs but his respectful caresses fail to satisfy her psychic need for brutal degradation.

8 MERA NAAM JOKER

Years ago, Mera Naam Joker brought to light the fantasies of a teenaged boy despite problems with the Central Board of Film Certification. The adolescent Raju (Rishi Kapoor) is infatuated with his teacher Mary (Simi Garewal). In one scene, she falls into the water and gets soaked. A mesmerised Raju gets a glimpse of her beautiful legs. She changes behind a bush but it's enough to spark off a fantasy in his mind at night.

9 AMERICAN BEAUTY

Lester (Kevin Spacey) is in the midst of what appears to be a mid-life crisis. He falls for a high school girl, his daughter's sexually precocious friend, Angela Hayes (Mena Suvari). His imaginary affair with Angela renews and reinvigorates him. Lester fantasises about Angela unbuttoning, caressing her clothed breasts, thrusting her hips and opening her sweater while the rose petals obscure her breasts. At other times, she's in a bathtub with rose petals (again). American Beauty's sequences are quintessential fantasies because of the Lolita angle.

10 ORIGINAL SIN

Original Sin featured Antonio Banderas and Angelina Jolie. The couple engaged in sex at various places, including a metal bathtub. Jolie cheats on him but they get back even while she's with another man. The sex gets steamier. The idea of doing something risqué keeps things interesting.
