

Dancing Queen

She is a practising doctor, but Srinidhi Chidambaram, daughter-in-law of Home Minister P. Chidambaram, is also an expert Bharatanatyam dancer. Her performance in Chennai this month drew dance gurus and fans alike. It was special as she performs just a few times a year. No wonder everyone turned out to see her deft moves.

"Skin show was important"

Neha Dhupia is daring to bare once again after Julie. This time she's shocking for a cause. With the Go Green calendar by Franchise India, Neha's asking people to save water and the earth.

Q. Why choose a calendar for the cause?

A. People are so numb that they need something that screams out.

Q. But why go topless?

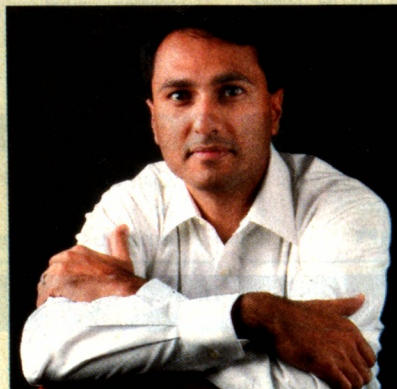

A. This calendar is about being close to nature so it was important to show skin.

Q. How green are you?

A. I time my showers so I don't waste water. I never buy bottled water as it's plastic. For my next film in Pune, I'll make sure people travel in a car pool.

TRIUMPH OF FAITH

India-born Eboo Patel, 34, a member of Barack Obama's faith advisory council, has become the first Muslim to win the prestigious Grawemeyer Award in Religion for his 2007 autobiography. The book describes his struggle to reconcile his different identities as an Indian, Muslim and American. Ranked as one of America's best leaders by a news magazine, his will be one face to watch.

ITSY BITSY

She wanted to be a lawyer. But Esha Gupta is being called the model to watch all thanks to her bikini appearance as one of the Kingfisher Calendar girls this year. With film offers in the bag, she's often called the Indian Angelina Jolie because of her striking resemblance to the Hollywood actor. "People say I try too hard to look like her. Why would I do that? But it feels good for sure," says the 23-year-old. Why wouldn't it?
