

THE LEFT NO LONGER FITS INTO THE
SOCIAL SCHEME OF PRESENT-DAY
KOLKATA OR WEST BENGAL.

banners everywhere on Kolkata streets. That was when the triumvirate of Priya Ranjan Dasgupta, Subrata Mukherjee and Somen Mitra ruled the streets of the city as young Congress leaders. They were seen as more liberal and Left than the conservative, stern Jyoti Basu and Hare Krishna Konars, not to forget men like Ashoke Mitra who mouthed more theory than even texts could hold.

Sarkar says, "The Congress leaders were young, appeared more Left than the leftist CPI(M) themselves when it came to helping the poor. The Naxals were far too Left for comfort. The CPI(M) was yet to take real roots. Mrs Gandhi had just nationalised banks and taken up anti-poor schemes with her 'Garibi Hatao' slogan. Who could be more Left than a revolutionary woman who had won the Bangladesh war for the country and helped, of all communities, Bengalis across the border to boot."

Perhaps Sarkar has a point in that. It is this same logic which saw Netaji Subhas Chandra Bose, a Congressman,
