Number of centres: 105
Present in: 14 states and 63 cities number of people in India who have never gone beyond primary school. For them, occupational training is the best option. Even young women like Kotkar in Maharashtra's rural hamlets are dreaming of white-collar jobs. Vocational training courses conducted by specialised Industrial Training Institutes (ITI) and Pratham will perhaps help fulfil such dreams. Says Ajay Swarup of GRAS Academy, which partners with the Centre and state governments to offer 400 vocational training courses across its 20 centres in India: "By 2015, over 50 per cent of India's population will be around 25 years of age, but it's important to make this population employable. The Central Government has launched the National Skills Commission (NSC), whereby training will be imparted to the unskilled youth

AMAR GADE, 21 Mumbai Customer Care Executive

Gade dropped out of school to support his family but then joined CAP Foundation's centre for computer, spoken English and other skills. Now works with a cellular firm.

"Thanks to this course and job, I can speak in English and have a proper career."

MUJAHID SHAIKH, 24 Delhi Data Entry Operator

It was Vedanta Foundation's vocational course that trained him in basic computer operations and spoken English. Now, he works by day and studies by night.

"Earlier I used to sit at home. Now I contribute to the family income and repay my father's loan."
