

The Healthcare Boom

APRIL 12, 2010

Innovations, acquisitions, expansions, world-class technology and five-star service. It's all happening in the Rs 2,00,000-crore healthcare industry with tangible benefits for patients.

“Rapid promotion of private tertiary healthcare under the hypnotising influence of the market economy and neglect of public and primary healthcare exposes the increasing gulf between ‘real’ and ‘unreal’ India.”

Wealth of Health

Ultimately what makes or mars the treatment of a disease is the diagnostic ability of the physician, the technical competency of the surgeon and the humaneness with which the doctors and nursing staff deal with the patient (“The Healthcare Boom”, April 12). All the imposing infrastructure as well as the corporate superstructure under which all these capital-intensive treatments are tried out come to nought in the absence of a doctor who can find out what the patient is suffering from and a dedicated nursing staff who look after the patient.

In such a scenario it is indeed heartwarming to learn that there would be full-fledged elections for the Indian Youth Congress (IYC) later this year. Democracy must prevail over everything else and when it is in the Congress, it is all the more welcome news for Indian politics.

investments in several healthcare facilities and health infrastructure in India. The superspecialties which have benefited from the boom are cardiology, cardiac surgery, critical care, minimal-invasive surgery, neurology, neurosurgery, oncology and specialised procedures in orthopaedics, say analysts. The healthcare industry is all set to grow exponentially and India, in particular, with its intrinsic qualities can become the global healthcare hub.

Big players, more investment, mega projects, improved technology, excellent service, experts on the job—all this may help the Rs 2,00,000-crore sector to reach Rs 3,00,000 crore by 2012.
