

motivational inputs were being provided to the terrorists at Nariman House, Oberoi and Trident Hotel and the Taj Hotel. The terrorists and the co-conspirators were briefing each other in real time and all conversations have been recovered.

■ The Indian Government asked the FBI for technical help in tracing the numbers and conversations. They obliged and the investigation was able to establish that the mobile numbers were connected to an account created with Callphonex, a VOIP service provider based in New Jersey, USA. On October 20 and 21, 2008, an individual who identified himself as Kharak Singh said he was interested in establishing an account with Callphonex. He made two payments. On October 27, the initial payment of $250 was wired to Callphonex via MoneyGram. The sender for this payment was Muhammad Ishfaq. The sender used Money Gram agent Paracha International Exchange located at Road Anarkali Fayazuddin in Lahore. According to Money Gram records, Ishfaq provided an address of post of-

■ Investigations also established the involvement of a Pakistan army officer, Colonel Saadat Ullah, whose address has been traced to Special Communication Organisation, Qasim Road, Rawalpindi, with an official government e-mail id pmit@sco.gov.pk. The organisation is believed to be an ISI department. Colonel Ullah was also involved in communication between the terrorists during the Mumbai siege and has been named as a co-conspirator.

■ The terrorists used five mobile handsets for communicating/seeking instructions from the co-conspirators in Pakistan. The investigation into the IMEI numbers of these handsets has revealed that these were manufactured at the Nokia factory in Dong Guan, China and shipped to Pakistan. The vendor who supplied the handsets has been traced to a company named 12 Pakistan (Pvt) Ltd. The address given is: 2nd Floor, Executive Tower, Dolmen City, Block 4, Clifton, Karachi, Pakistan.

■ Addresses of all 10 terrorists were traced in the investigation. Kasab hailed from Faridkot, Ismail Khan was
