from Dera Ismail Khan, Punjab, Pakistan, Nasir Ahmed belonged to Faisalabad, Hafiz Arshad, Abdul Rehman and Imran Babar were all from Multan, Fahad Ullah belonged to Ujarashamukam, Dipalpur, Javed was from Okara, in Punjab, while Shoaib's family are from Shakkar Road, Sialkot.

The real insight is that for all his boyish looks and young age, Kasab turned out to be a cold-blooded killer consumed not so much by jihadi ideology but bloodlust. The terrorists, as instructed in Karachi, split into pairs once they reached the Mumbai shoreline near the Gateway of India. By the time he was captured alive at 1.30 a.m. on 27/11, approximately five hours after landing, he and his partner Abu Ismail had killed 72 people, including 14 policemen and seven children. Kasab's killing spree and that of the nine other terrorists has been well documented but the chargesheet recreates his bloody journey in greater detail, from the time they left Pakistan by a boat, Al Husaini, in the early hours of November 23, 2008 and that same afternoon, boarded and took over M.V. Kuber, a fishing trawler in the Jakhau area, eventually transferring to the rubber dinghy to reach the coast of Mumbai on November 26, 2008. What shows Kasab's bloodthirsty nature is that the navigator of the trawler was killed by slitting his throat. Kasab's confession and forensic evidence shows it was he who committed the act.
