

A new TV show, Raaz Pichle Janam Ka, promises to dig into celebs' previous births via past life regression. The following have agreed to be hypnotised. Here's some things we'd like to know.

SUSHMITA SINHA We're wondering if Sushmita (below) was a bored housewife in her pichla janam. What else explains the whimsy, the drama and the need to change partners faster than we can say Do Knot Disturb.

SHIKHAR SUMAN We have heard enough about his biceps. Is there a school bully from a past life to blame? Or a spurned love interest who wanted a sixpack and not sixty jokes?

CELINA JAIN Her sartorial choices have left us thoroughly baffled. We demand to know the reason behind those pointy shoes, tiny shorts and oh-my-God make-up.

Playing it Again

He's going back to where it all started. Shatrughan Sinha, actor-turned-BJP MP, started as a reel-life hero, joined politics and is now returning to celluloid. Sinha will soon be seen as late Telugu leader N.T. Rama Rao in Ram Gopal Varma's Rakta Charitra. And this role is particularly special because just like Sinha, NTR himself was a very popular actor before turning politician. He became the chief minister of Andhra Pradesh after his party swept the Assembly elections in 1983. Wonder if Sinha said yes precisely because of this coincidence?

A NEW LEAF

Riteish Deshmukh is taking on a new calling. No, he isn't joining politics like daddy and big brother. Nor is he giving up Bollywood. The actor is in fact turning chaiwala. Deshmukh will soon be opening a chain of tea centres called Chai Piyo Ji. The first one, serving all kinds of teas from the world over, will open in his beloved South Mumbai. The green tea lover has been working on the project for two years now and already has a logo in place. Wah Riteish.

Slam Dunk

Geethu Anna Jose is literally standing tall. The 6-ft-2-inch captain of the Indian women's basketball team has dribbled her way to becoming Asia's best. Traditionally, women from Korea, China or Japan rule the roost but finally an Indian has been seeded first according to the ranking by the Federation of International Basketball Association. "I still have to recover from the news," says Jose, who's at a camp in Bangalore preparing for a Three-on-Three indoor tourney in Vietnam.
