

what the government has done and left undone since the Mumbai attacks last November

AJIT KUMAR DOVAL	G. PARTHASARATHY	KAPIL KAK	KIRAN BEDI	AJAI SAHNI	V.K. DATTA	AMITABH MATTOO
Optimal use of existing capacity. Sustained, calibrated diplomatic pressure on Pakistan.	Thwarting the US attempt to link Kashmir to Af-Pak. Strong message to Pakistan against repeat of 26/11.	Heightened levels of preparedness post-26/11. Not exercising the military option.	Chidambaram's daily meeting with security chiefs. Reaching out to the Central police organisations.	Tremendous improvement in IB's coordination. Central agencies geared up to cooperate with the state agencies.	Proof of Pakistan's involvement in the 26/11 terror strikes. Dossiers to put them on defensive.	Carte blanche to Chidambaram from the PM. The NSG hubs, the NIA and the IB have better coordination.
Make institutional changes in security establishment. Start building additional capacity on the ground.	Work to influence Pakistan's military. Open a back channel with the ISI to warn them what not to do.	Improvement in intelligence assessments which are crucial for managing terror.	Home Minister must meet state DGPs. Groom leadership and reach out to the foot soldiers.	Build additional capacity in security establishment. Fix the dysfunctional system, vulnerable to attacks.	Improve poor response time of the NSG hubs. Improve ability to carry out pre-emptive strikes against terrorists.	Initiate diplomacy to deal with civil society actors and pro-India interest in Pakistan.
/10	/10	/10	/10	/10	/10	/10

point is that we are able to work with this system and get provisions in the Kerry-Lugar Act which for the first time singled out and conditioned aid to Pakistan to fund terrorism across its borders. This was a conscious effort and the embassy and the ambassador deserve some credit for it. We have been able to influence one side, but also managed to move away from the initial pressure. We will have to find a mechanism at least on a back channel to engage the ISI. Whether or not to share intelligence is debatable, but we should spell out specifically what they should not do and what we mean by the infrastructure of terrorism. How that works out still remains to be seen. Pakistan has got its hands full on its western border and it may have to pay a heavier price if it repeats or even tries to repeat something like the 26/11. This message has been conveyed primarily because many citizens from other countries were affected by the terror strike and, most importantly, the Israelis too had their own impact.

This was the fall out of Mumbai. India derived a benefit and, in fact, it neutralised many things the previous government did like weeping about Pakistan being a victim of terrorism, joint terror mechanism and all such nonsense. If the Government shifts its focus with respect to Pakistan, to tell them about the price which they will have to pay and about what we mean by the terrorism infrastructure, it will be useful. Pakistan is in a very delicate situation and my hunch says that its army will run into a mess in Waziristan. There's a power struggle going on between the army and President Asif Ali Zardari. If the army prevails, then they will be emboldened to look eastwards. If they don't, they could well be emboldened to divert attention and so under no circumstances should we let down our guard. Chidambaram has changed the ambience of the Government and the way it looks towards terrorism. In China's case though, its Government seems to have gone the other direction. Immediately after Mumbai, they welcomed Pakistan's Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff General Tariq Majid and held out all sorts of goodies to him. The Saudis have been quiet apart from voting on Kashmir in the Organisation of the Islamic Conference.

Kapil Kak, Additional Director,