

dealing with an obstinate Pakistan, we have to look at the Pakistan Army. How are we going to deal with them? The Pakistani Army wants to remain in power in the country, enjoy all the perks by beating any sort of threat from India. So, India must say that there is no threat from India. We want to have a dialogue over Kashmir and people in Pakistan should not worry about anything that the Indian Army will do. We secured Bangladesh and handed it over to them to run their own country. So that is one. Let the people of Pakistan believe that there is no threat from the Indian Army. Therefore, undermine the bogey of threat from our army.

As far as Jammu and Kashmir is concerned, a dialogue at national, international, back channels, forward channels is important and the people of Jammu and Kashmir are the key to resolving the problem. Pakistan is splintered. But what remains unanswered is if it is in our interest. If Pakistan disintegrates, we say the overflow will come to India but we are already dealing with them. We will tackle whatever comes to us. We are ready for that. We have not done anything great. The

V.K.
DATTA

Nothing concrete has been done. Infiltration continues. Terrorist groups like LeT and JeM continue to flourish.

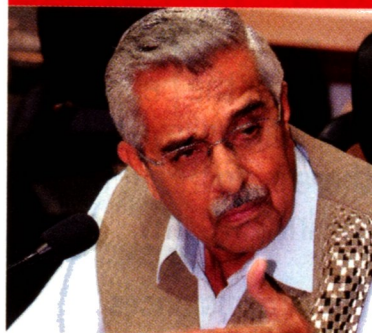

Do not resume dialogue at any cost till Pakistan takes credible measures to curb terrorism.

AMITABH
MATTOO

India has failed to develop a strategy to engage Pakistan with a multi-pronged approach. Our offensive strike capabilities have been doubtful.

Resume the composite dialogue. Engage the business community and civil society in Pakistan.

SATISH NAMBIAR

“ I don't subscribe to the view that India should work for the stability of Pakistan. If Pakistan wants to go down the drain, let them. We need to factor in the spillover effects.

There maybe pressure on India to make concessions on J&K from the US since Pakistan is helping them in Afghanistan.

The dialogue should continue if for nothing else but to create a facade that we are not shying away from talks.

If push comes to shove and we have to take some action, we should go ahead because even if Pakistan escalates, we will be able to deal with that. ”

KAPIL KAK

“ We need to understand that Pakistan is a Yugoslavia in the making and there is a disconnect between the state and the society.

Sharm el-Sheikh was badly handled, but it was one of the steps towards a strategic leap of faith.

Those calling for hardline options have been proved wrong post-26/11.

We need to work on a multi-layered strategy with Pakistan. While dialogue should continue, there should be containment in focussed areas. ”