

exemplifies this better than the success of former models Katrina Kaif, 25, and Deepika Padukone, 23, in the movies. Katrina, who first made her debut in Kaizad Gustaad's Boom, is now one of the most successful heroines, even showing a bit of acting depth in Kabir Khan's New York. Deepika, after bursting on the screens in Farah Khan's psychedelic Om Shanti Om, has shown some mettle in Imtiaz Ali's Love Aaj Kal. While Katrina has overcome an obvious lack of knowledge of Hindi, Deepika has made a smooth transition from being a champion's daughter to a celebrity in her own right. Both Katrina and Deepika have actor boyfriends, which is sufficient to keep the tabloids interested in their lives. Both are also showing signs of wanting to grow beyond their IT girl tags. While Katrina is playing a Sonia Gandhi clone in Prakash Jha's Rajneeti, Deepika is a chain smoker acting opposite a lonely brooder Farhan Akhtar in Karthik Calling Karthik. Both have graced magazine covers, sell everything from soaps to shampoos, and walk the ramp for "friends" in their time off. They are also playing truer to type in movies such as Ajab Prem ki Ghazab Kahani for Katrina, where she is Ranbir Kapoor's sweetheart, and Sajid Khan's Houseful for Deepika, where she is funny foil to Akshay Kumar.

Coming Up...

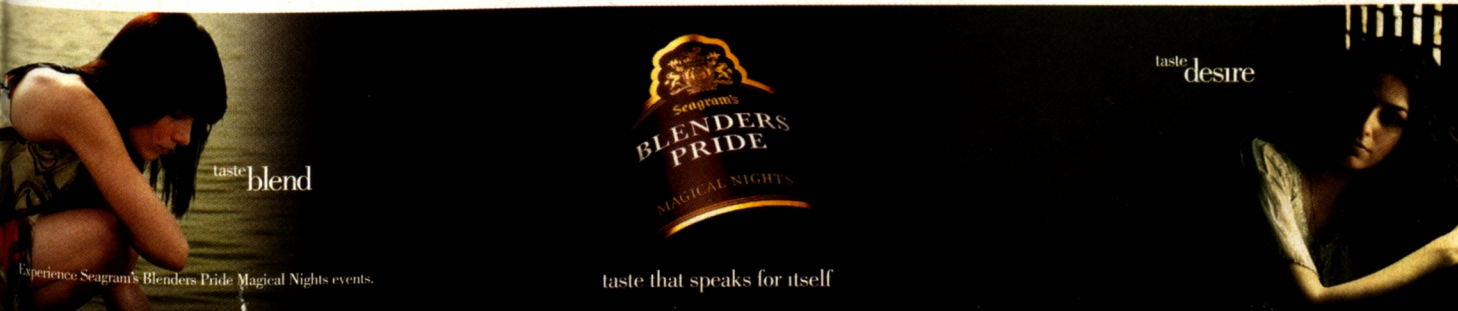

There's Kangana Ranaut, 22, the A-list queen of B-list movies from Mandi in Himachal Pradesh, who refuses to fit into any mould. There's Asin Thottumkal, 24, the fiery Malayalee who can mix fire and ice, play naughty as effortlessly as she plays nice. There's Sonam Kapoor, 24, part-time fashionista and full-time old world charmer, in whose work a seasoned director like Rakeysh Om Prakash Mehra can see echoes of Waheeda Rehman. And there's Genelia D'Souza, 22, the girl everyone wants to take home, whose frothy personality seems to be tailored for comic capers. The four powerpuff girls seem

Sonam Kapoor, 24

Her classic looks are a throwback to another era as is her talent. She can dance, sing, and yes, she can act up a storm.

Asin, 24

She has a shortlist of the best in Bollywood that she wants to work with. Well, Aamir Khan, Salman Khan and Ajay Devgn are already done.
