

Kurta Call

Desi wear seems to be finding favour with Bollywood girls. Ka-reena Kapoor, promoting one film after another, has been relying on Manish Malhotra's gota-bordered kurtas and churidar in blue, red and pink. She looks lovely, but it seems like a uniform now. Give it a rest.

Minus the kilos and adding a stylist, Vidya Balan seems to be climbing the right sartorial stairs. When she's not wearing Sabyasachi, the actor digs into her closet of anarkali kurtas. Often at risk of being arrested by the fashion police, Balan's making no mistake this time.

ALL SHE CAN

There's no dearth of action in Anushka Manchanda's life. The 24-year-old singer and Fear Factor: Khatron Ke Khiladi-winner is looking towards films now. Manchanda makes her debut with Dulha Mil Gaya. "I always joke that ja-wani abhi hai. I like to do other things," she says. The Golmaal crooner has also sung three songs, one with Adnan Sami, for the film. This being a cameo, she says she would like to do a fun role. Is there anything she doesn't want to do?

Apocalypse Guru

The mother of all doomsday movies, 2012 has an Indian connection. Jimi Mistry, 36, the British-Indian actor who shot to fame as the faux sex sage in The Guru, plays an Indian-origin scientist in this thriller. He discovers the world is actually going to end. The film has raked in $225 million worldwide on its opening weekend. Mistry is now busy shooting two comedies—Gurinder Chadha's It's A Wonderful Afterlife and a sequel to East is East.

KHAKI TRUTH

Y.P. Singh, the ex-IPS officer-turned-lawyer, is paying tribute to the brave officials who lost their lives on 26/11. Singh has directed a music video titled Yahi Sach Hai, which begins with lauding the police force but then highlights corruption. It ends with how the officers lost their lives due to faulty equipment and demands accountability. "It is meant to motivate the youth," he says. It's only fitting that slain ATS chief Hemant Karkare's wife Kavita, who's filed a case against his missing bulletproof jacket, unveiled the video.
