Gujarat Cooperative Milk Marketing Federation (GCMMF), which markets Amul, has turned into a battleground for the BJP and the Congress. After Dr. V. Kurien was made to resign as GCMMF's chairman in 2006 for his "dictatorial ways", its managing director B.M. Vyas has put in his papers after four decades of working for the group. Vyas had played an important role in raising Amul's annual turnover to Rs 8,000 crore. He quit last week after a scuffle with 13 board members for the leadership of the dairy. Vyas was against their demand that the cooperative's audit be given to a government auditor instead of Ernst & Young. GCMMF's chief general manager R.S. Sodhi will replace Vyas. The moves at Amul are a larger Gujarat BJP strategy to use government muscle to control the state's cooperative sector that has been in the Congress' hand for decades.
