

26/11: The Inside Story

MAY 17, 2010

The police chargesheet is exhaustive and clearly establishes the Pakistani connection and also adds new details about Kasab's killing spree in Mumbai.

“Any threat to India's security should not be ignored by our judiciary. Since Ajmal Amir Kasab's crime was against humanity, he deserves no sympathy even considering his tender age.”

VINOD C. DIXIT, Ahmedabad

Course of Law

The court has rightly given death sentence to Ajmal Kasab ("26/11: The Inside Story", May 17). The law on terrorism must be enacted with retrospective effect so that no appeal to higher court(s) or mercy petition to the President is allowed in the case of terrorists, once they are convicted and sentenced by a lower court. Further, the root of terrorist camps where they are trained must be destroyed. Only then can terrorism be eliminated.

The verdict, as only expected, could be termed fair but every day that goes by without execution of that death penalty is going to add to the obvious travesty of justice and

Wake-up Call

Union Sports Minister M.S. Gill has taken a bold decision by asking politicians not to consider sports bodies their personal property ("The Tenure Tussle", May 17). They are known to have an intense love affair with such powerful seats and will not leave any stone unturned to stick to these positions. Now, the big question is: who will ensure that they are shown the doors?

BAL GOVIND, Noida

Critics are certain to question the wisdom of placing a ceiling on sports bodies and not on other democratic institutions like Parliament. Mismanagement and misuse of funds by these bodies have also come in the way of promoting a healthy sports culture in the country.

thereby the trauma of the victims' kith and kin. The trickiest and, if one may say, the ugliest part of it all comes hereon when our political brethren will take over. To this breed, political expediency is paramount, not national honour, not humiliation and ravage that the country has been subjected to by state-sponsored terror from across the border.

ANJUM M. SAMEL, Mumbai

The debate about death penalty versus life sentence wouldn't have risen had it not been for an earlier Supreme Court observation that the death penalty should be administered only in the "rarest of rare" cases. This statement came about ironically in another case involving the death penalty in circumstances most
