"Not worth rating."

In UPA II, there is no government at all. The deficient, incoherent contradictions between cabinet ministers, bullying tactics by alliance partners, stinking corruption are the hallmarks of the first year of the UPA II.

Mobilising numbers, misusing the CBI and buckling under alliance pressure.

Whether it is economic crisis or internal security or external affairs, this Government's performance is a miserable failure. It is not worth a Government.

Arithmetically they can manoeuvre and survive, but they have lost the moral authority.

UPA II is a total failure. They are thick skinned on corruption and have failed to contain price rise. All sections of the society are facing trouble. They can go to any extent to save the Government. Ministers are making statements without control. There is hardly any work that can be judged as good.

None. They talk about aam aadmi, but this a Government of the rich, by the rich, for the rich.

The Government has failed on the issues of corruption, price rise and its ministers who are uncontrolled.

No, it will not last its full term. It will fall under the weight of its contradictions.

"One year is too short."

So far as the Government's performance within Jammu and Kashmir and also on issues relating to the state is concerned, it has been quite discouraging. Development and political fronts, both leave much to be desired.

Succeeded in reducing impact of recession, acknowledging the Maoist threat and handling political crisis within the coalition.

Rise in prices, corruption and the peace process around resolution of the Jammu and Kashmir issue.

There is no apparent reason why it should not last the full term.

Declined to grade

During UPA I, the Government was pushed to take pro-poor measures due to pressure from the Left. But now it has unleashed a series of measures benefiting only the rich and powerful.

Women's Reservation Bill. Efforts to improve relations with Pakistan. Right to Education Bill.

The internal security situation has worsened. The Government has failed to control price rise and their education policy is making higher education elitist.

Going by the corruption prevalent in the UPA, it will be difficult for it to survive the full term.

8/10

With a visionary prime minister and a committed reformer in the Congress president there is cohesion in policy formulation and implementation. Initiatives like the Women's Reservation Bill have been made and more are to be announced, including statehood for Telangana.

Rural employment through the NREGA, the New Education Policy and the announcement of a separate Telangana.

They have not failed though there may be some weaknesses here and there.

They can face and overcome any challenge.
